About the Malaghan Institute

The Malaghan Institute is New Zealand's leading independent medical research centre. We are a charitable trust based in a purpose-built facility on the Kelburn campus of Victoria University, Wellington.

We rely on contestable research grants, along with support from corporate sponsors and the community to continue our groundbreaking research. We don't receive any direct government funding; therefore fundraising and community events are a vital part of supporting our research.

Our scientists believe that the key to fighting illness lies in the immune system and our cutting-edge research programmes are focused on finding better treatments and cures for diseases affecting New Zealanders - including cancer, asthma, arthritis, MS and infectious diseases.
